OUR REVIEW of the cotton market last week quoted middling in New York at 15½c; the next day it declined to 15½c; on Monday it advanced to 15½c; on Tuesday again declined to 15½; on for each week since the present season opened. From last year's price of Wednesday, to 15te, and on Friday to 1545-a thorough week of declines, New Orleans quoted a week ago 15c, and so middling ic is deducted, to assimilate the value with the new classification: continued throughout. Liverpool quoted 7 9-16d, but on Wednesday fell to 74d and on Friday to 7 7-16d. In Memphis the quotation was 144c, which on Thursday became 144c, and on Friday

Thursday became 14½c, and on Friday 14½c. This statement shows a decline in New York, during the wesk, of 4;; Liverpool, ½d, and Memphis ½c. The history of the cotton week lies in these figures; the great cause of the fall in prices is the ample stocks in Liverpool, the disposition to use them up before making further purchase, and—the cause of all the weakness—the continued wonderful news about the condition of the crop. Cotton is growing in abundsance; there has been a 3½ per cent. acreage increase over last season, but what the increase in yield is to be remains to be seen. From Tennessee to Texas, and from Arkansas to the guif, there is only one report, and that report is a shout of triumph for good crops in prospect. In our market the demand is alight at the end of the week, but orders, considering the condition of things, have been plentiful; but the small stock we have on hand—9400 bales—made it difficult to fill them in some cases. The "hope against bope," the "strong confidence that knows no submission," have given way to c'reumstrances. Among the sales of the week was a lot of cotton that was bought in March at 16½c; since time the owner had paid storage, insurance, and other expenses, sure it would bring him 20c a pound—it sold for 15c.

At the opening the steadier advices from Liverpool induced a sympathetic feeling here, and drew out some demand to cover, not only among our own operators, but on orders from the south. This was followed by rumors all more or less unpromising and of a 18th: the south. This was followed by rumors of a weakness in the foreign market, and the tone became tame." The English bankrupteles, especially the Manchester one, had a very heavy effect upon the market, referred to by the Bulletin, which says further; "The occurrence of a series of failures in the most important branches of English trade, and the weakness especially apparent in the great eastern trade of Manchester, is a matter of our import to the cotton trade. This break-down in English credit argues an musound state of trade in that country, which can be remedied only at the expense of an inevitable collapse of general princes, resulting in the return to a generally lower scale of values; and with gusta, 14 c.
